Hi [redacted],

Thank you for taking the time to speak with me last week. I really enjoyed our conversation, and I hope you did too.

Unfortunately, you have not been selected as a finalist for the Data Scientist position with the Buffalo Sabres.

We started with 300+ applicants for this position, which we narrowed down to a group including you and about 40 other highly qualified candidates who participated in the Data Analysis Challenge. From there, the best 11 candidates were selected, all of whom interviewed with me last week.

We were then left with the extremely difficult task of narrowing it down to a very small number of final candidates for the position. Although we were impressed with [redacted – candidate specific information], we chose a small number of highly qualified candidates who we felt were slightly better fits for what we need in this particular position.

If you have any time this week (or weekend), I hope to have an opportunity to share more specific feedback with you via phone. If you are interested in that, please send me your availability, and I will make something work.

Finally, as I mentioned on our call, we hope to expand our department further in the future. If and when that happens, I would consider you a top candidate for such a position, and I would be excited if you chose to apply again in the future.

Thanks again for all of the time and effort that you put into this application process, and best of luck moving forward.

Sam
